ROYAL AIR FORCE

The Fleet Air Arm

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, Feb. 1.
The adoption of the Seagull amphibian as a service type for the Fleet Air Arm and its issue to H.M.S. Nelson brings up the number of Fleet aircraft types in regular use to seven. This excludes the Fairey Elycatcher, the last of which has just been brought home from China in the cruiser Cumberland.

During the present year the replacement of the Fairey III F. by later types already in use will reduce the total to six. These are, besides the Seagull, the Nimrod fighter, the Osprey fighter-reconnaissance aircraft, the Baffin torpedo bomber, the Seal spotter-reconnaissance aircraft, and the new Shark torpedo spotter-reconnaissance machine, combining the work of two distinct types. All these six types have come into use since 1931, whereas some of the designs hitherto in service in the Fleet Air Arm have been 10 years old.

NO. 802 SQUADRON

Squadron Leader R. H. Hammer, M.C., who was recently relieved by Squadron Leader Frank Wright in command of No. 41 (Fighter) Squadron of Fury aircraft at Tangmere, is appointed in command of No. 802 Squadron in the Fleet Air Arm, at present allocated to H.M.S. Courageous. This unit has Nimrod and Osprey aircraft, the former being the Fleet Air Arm adaptation of the Fury single-seater interceptor. Squadron Leader Hammer, who was at Sandhurst and in The Royal Welch Fusiliers before joining the R.F.C., has not previously served with Fleet aircraft.

WORK IN THE FAR EAST

Although it was not until 1927 that any shore-based units of the R.A.F. were stationed in the Far East, when a flyingboat squadron flew out from England, great progress has since been made. This work in the Far East will be the subject of a lecture at the Royal United Service Institution by Group Captain A. C. Wright, A.F.C., at which Air Vice-Marshal P. B. Joubert de la Ferte, C.M.C., D.S.O., will preside. Group Captain Wright commanded No. 205 (Flying Boat) Squadron at Singapore in 1931-33, and took it on a cruise to Australia and back. He will deal with the functions of land and sea aircraft in co-operation with the Navy and Army and the air surveys of anchorages in the Andaman and Nicobar Islands.

JAPANESE ATTACHMENT

The Air Ministry announce that Captain Arimori, of the Japanese Military Air Service, joined the Home Aircraft Depot at Henlow, Bedfordshire, on January 21, and will be attached there until March 30, to study the organization of and the work carried out by this unit.

HOW EMDEN MET DOOM

Cocos Cable Staff
Real Heroes

The death of Mr. F. de Horsey Farrant, recalls the famous fight between H.M.A.S. Sydney and the German raiding cruiser Emden, for it was largely through his presence of mind and forethought that the raider met her fate.

Mr. Farrant was attached to the foreign staff of the Eastern Extension Telegraph Company, and served in the Far East for many years. He was in charge at Cocos Island when the war broke out. The news of the Emden's raiding expeditions during August, 1914, engaged Mr. Farrant's attention in view of the most important lines of communication at Cocos Island.

Although the probability of a visit by the German cruiser at that time seemed rather remote, Mr. Farrant, with much forethought, organized the small community of 32 men into a state of preparedness, although unarmed.

Spare instruments were secreted in various parts of the island, and, in addition, a constant watch was maintained from the roof of the staff quarters, day and night. The wisdom of Mr. Farrant's precautions was amply proved on the morning of November 9, when, in the early dawn, news of the Emden's approach was broadcast by radio and cable from the island.

The engagement of the Emden by the Sydney three hours later is now history, but comparatively few know that contact with the enemy raider was so speedily brought about by this astute and unassuming Englishman.

The late Mr. F. de H. Farrant was manager of the Hong Kong Branch of the Eastern Extension Telegraph Company from 1919 to 1920 when he retired on pension.

Clever

They had just been married and were about to start on their wedding trip. He was embarrassed to the point of forgetfulness, but he met the situation expertly.

"Why Harry, you've bought only one ticket," reproached the bride. "Just like me, dear," flashed Harry, "always forgetting myself."

THE AFFAIRS OF CELLINI

The Story Of A Great Lover, A Great
Artist—The Most Charming
Rascal Of All Time

(By LEWIS ALLEN BROWNE)

Benvenuto was forced to use his dagger with his left hand.

No more skilled artisan in precious metals and gems lived in all the Old World during the 16th century than Benvenuto Cellini of Florence. At the same time he was a veritable firebrand, when wronged or thought that he was wronged; while his fame as a great lover was almost as great as his fame as a goldsmith. Della Sansina, his one love, disappears with her mother, to marry another; he is told, whereupon Benvenuto swears that women are for toys, not matrimony, so far as he is concerned. The war between Charles V and Francis I brought dire distress to Italy. In Rome, at this time, Pope Clement appoints Benvenuto captain of his bombardiers and he saves the castle with his skill, but he disobeys an order not to fire a salvo, given by Cardinal Orsini, who orders that Benvenuto be hanged at once.

"I was ordered," Benvenuto replied to Cardinal Orsini, "to fire as I saw fit, since I was placed here as captain of the bombardiers, Your Eminence. I saw fit to fire as I did because the enemy was thickest there."

"No excuses! You deliberately fired the salvo that will cause the rabble to massacre us, but I intend to see you hanged first, to make sure of that much. It is with delight that I shall see you hanged, you swaggering, impudent Florentine!"

"One moment, Your Eminence," Benvenuto called, in a sweet voice. The Cardinal turned to sneer and his face went pale, for Benvenuto had turned one of the heavy swivel guns about so that the muzzle was directed toward the Cardinal who stood at the head of the descending stairway, not twenty feet away. "If your Eminence but take one step toward the stairs," Benvenuto said, still quite pleasantly, "there will be need of another Cardinal to order me hanged."

Routed the Enemy

Orsini stared at the big gun, and then at Benvenuto who stood, firing torch in hand, ready to discharge it.

"Go you to the Pope," Benvenuto ordered one of his men, "and bring him here if he would save the life of one of his Cardinals."

The soldier hesitated. Benvenuto made a motion as if to draw his sword, and the man departed hastily.

Sooner than he expected, the Pope appeared with two of his guards. "Must we quarrel among ourselves when we have real enemies to fight?" Clement asked, querulously.

Cardinal Orsini believed himself safe in the presence of the Holy Father.

"This young man threatened to kill me, Father!" he cried.

Clement turned questioning to Benvenuto.

"Quite so, Your Holiness, after he ordered me hanged," he said.

Clement said to his Cardinal, "No one here is to be hanged without my orders." He peered down at the house that had been riddled. Men were pouring forth, many carrying wounded out on litters, and up the street the enemy was retreating in considerable disorder.

"You have routed the enemy, Benvenuto," he said. He turned to the Cardinal. "It seems that, despite your early training at arms before you took orders, Orsini, my judgment was best. The thing that I wanted done and which Benvenuto carried out, has routed the enemy."

It was quite so. Cardinal Orsini watched the increasing numbers of the enemy hurrying toward the north gates. After a moment his excuse was:

"It was all due to my fear for your safety, Father."

Within a few months the siege was over, Rome was out of danger and Benvenuto was happily engaged in designing dies for the minting of coins for the Pope.

All dies completed, the Pope gave Benvenuto a commission to make a medal for a special occasion. Benvenuto, believing himself more of an artisan and less of an artist in matters of this sort, suggested Michelangelo. Thus it was that Angelo was called to the Vatican. Cardinal Orsini chanced to meet Angelo and heard him mention that he had been called there in connection with designing a medal. This was before Angelo had had his audience with the Pope. When he did learn from Clement what was wanted, Angelo said, "Holy Father, you have serving you now, one Benvenuto, a Florentine, who is better qualified for this particular work."

Now Cardinal Orsini did not know this. But he did know the suggested design for the medal. When the Pope showed him the completed medal, Atlas carrying the earth, Atlas in gold, the earthly crystal ball, and the sky in lapis lazuli, the Cardinal went into raptures over it.

"One can see at a glance that it is the work of the skilled Michelangelo!" he cried. "It is so far superior to anything that the overrated Benvenuto could do that it gives proof to my contention that Benvenuto is no artist!"

Pope Clement smiled only.

Michelangelo felt that he could not do this and advised that he get Benvenuto to do it. This is all the work of Benvenuto.

Cardinal Orsini took a fit of coughing to hide his chagrin and departed hastily as if in need of aid for his choking spell—the laughter of Clement ringing in his ears adding to his fury against Benvenuto.

Word came at this time of a great plague raging in Florence. Benvenuto's beloved father and a sister were there at the time. His brother Cecchino, was off at the wars to the north. Benvenuto knew that he would not be permitted to remove his father and sister from the city, and sent a trusted courier there with a generous sum of money.

Destroying Models

Meanwhile many hindrances were put in his way by Dinolfi, a clerk to Cardinal Orsini, and one night, returning to his shop for something, Benvenuto discovered Dinolfi there with an aid, in the act of destroying some precious wax models. The clerk managed to escape.

On threat of death, the aid confessed that he had been hired by Dinolfi, whereupon Benvenuto had him made prisoner and next day his confession sent to Clement.

Dinolfi was too loyal to involve the Cardinal, claiming that Orsini had no knowledge of his actions and that he had gone there to beg a favor of Benvenuto and had accidentally broken some of the wax models. Through Cardinal Orsini, the man escaped punishment.

To add to his troubles and the intriguing against him, instigated by Orsini and a group of jealous goldsmiths enlisted by the Cardinal to drive Benvenuto from Rome, word came from his dearest friend, Pier Landi, of the death from the plague of his beloved father and sister.

To forget his sorrows and annoyances, Benvenuto betook himself more frequently than ever to the comforts of the charming widow, Signora Gorini, who had been a great friend to him, secured him many profitable commissions, and also soothed him with her passionate love for him.

Benvenuto had dined happily with the beautiful Signora Gorini late one evening, had charmed her with his music for some hours and later was exchanging gossip with her in her supposedly secret rooms off this garden, when violent knocks sounded on the outer door.

Signora Gorini was instantly in terror. "Discovery would ruin her."

"You must escape unseen," she whispered, running to a secret lookout to acquaint herself as to how many were outside. Four men

FAMILY NAMES IN THE EAST

Choice Of Surnames
Spreading

Turks, Egyptians and Moslems of India are beginning to choose family names, or surnames. Generally they are not a very ancient institution even in the West, starting only about nine centuries ago as a consequence of the adoption of baptismal or Christian names. That fact did not recommend the practice to Moslems, and in India it still is a deterrent, though the Hindus have acknowledged its convenience.

Mustafa Kemal of Turkey, after abolishing titles as not consistent with the principles of the Turkish Republic, has now ordained that hereditary family names shall be adopted as a better means of identification than patronymics with tribal names attached. In the Moslem East it is common for schoolmasters to find half a dozen boys in one class bearing the same single name, such as Ahmad or Muhammad.

Kemal has already selected his family name. It sounds modern enough; it is Ataturk. But it means Chief Turk. Ismet Pasha has lost the Pasha, that title having been barred. His new name is Inonu. There will be no more Pashas, Agas, Effendis, Beys, Hajias, Hakzas or Hojas, nor will women be entitled to be designated Hanum (Lady). Civil ranks are done away with. Officers will use the title of their military rank, the highest being Marshal, General and Admiral.

In Egypt surnames are being evolved in this manner: Saleh (son of) Ali (who was the son of) Muhammad; or, Suleiman el (of) Samalouti (his birthplace); or a physical characteristic is being used, like Tekin Effendi, meaning Mr. Stout. As an occupation is often hereditary, some Egyptians are designating their line by the family calling, such as Ibrahim el Arbagi el Cairo—Arbagi being the same as Wagner in German or Carter in English.

On the verge of self-rule, India's people are recognizing that they need distinctive continuous family names. Frequently the one a person adopts is that of a caste or tribe—Bannarjee or Bose, for instance, among Hindus, and Qureshi or Khan among Moslems. Sometimes a writer gives his nom de plume to his family; thus have arisen the Wair and Nasir clans, among others.

Trade, especially international trade, and increasing contacts with the West, make surnames practically imperative in the Near East.

were in the loggia between her rooms and the private garden. How they could have made entrance was a mystery, for she did not suspect that some of her servants had been bribed.

Outside the pounding increased and stern orders to open were being shouted.

"Remain here, after a moment, open," Benvenuto whispered, "but first make your desk to appear as though you had been writing, then be most indignant, at the interruption. Meanwhile I will go up through the house and out by the basement on the lower side."

The frightened signora obeyed his instructions. Two guards leaped into the room when she opened the door and paid little heed to her angry protests that they had disturbed her at her accounts of household expenses.

"Where is your lover?" the leader demanded.

Benvenuto Wanted

"The goldsmith, Benvenuto, is hidden here," he cried, "we know that he came before dark and has not departed. He is wanted at once."

The signora protested more strenuously than ever, in her effort to kill time and give Benvenuto ample time to make his escape. Meanwhile one of the bribed servants, obedient to prearranged instructions gave a signal from the front upon seeing Benvenuto come up from the garden and go down the basement side.

As he peered out from the basement door in the narrow back alley, no one was in sight and, delighted with the apparent success of this trick, he stepped forth. Instantly two men stepped from the darkness and confronted him.

"Take him alive!" one of the men called, and instantly Benvenuto recognized the voice of Dinolfi, the clerk of Cardinal Orsini.

That was exactly the way that he did not intend to be taken, and as the other man leaped toward him, sword in hand, Benvenuto slashed so suddenly with his long light sword, that the man howled in pain and ran, holding his hand over the place where, but a moment before, an ear had been located.

STAPLES SURPRISES!

THE SERVING OF SALADS

Introducing Variety

The most delectable food on the dinner table is the salad! Or, at least, it should be. It is properly made and served! The proper making and serving of a salad is the real secret of converting a salad evader into a salad enthusiast.

Modern refrigeration not only makes it possible, but also, practical to keep a shelf of assorted salad ingredients always at command. Garnishments, such as pimiento, asparagus, parsley, radish roses and celery, will keep in the coolness of the refrigerator many days.

In addition to these semi-perishable materials, the salad shelf should have in waiting: stuffed olives, which may be served whole or thinly sliced; ripe olives; medium-sized dill pickles, which are generally sliced very thin or in strips, shoe-string style; small, very sweet pickles served as is, in halves or in fans; capers, which are sprinkled lightly over a vegetable salad or tossed through the mayonnaise.

Artistic Garnishings

Every salad should be garnished artistically. Usually, the rule to follow is that of contrast. A green salad is improved with pimiento, beet or radish or green; may be emphasized with deeper tones with the pickle fan, the laciness of a sprig of parsley or the crispness of water cress.

A molded salad such as tomato cup or spring vegetable is improved with a crisp garnish in the form of cucumber slices or celery curls. Salads made with fruit—pineapple, peach, apricot or pear—receive enhancement with a mound of cottage cheese which in turn is decorated with a choice of green pepper ring, thinly sliced stuffed olive, pimiento strips or a dash of paprika. Balls the size of large marbles may be molded from cream cheese and one is used to top the salad, or several may be used around the edge. The cheese balls are so attractive in themselves that they require no further adornment. A slice or wedge of lemon is a desirable garnish for a fish salad. Hard-boiled eggs either sliced or quartered are appetizing with mat or potato salads.

One who has not learned to enjoy mayonnaise or other salad dressing may set aside this course because the dressing is served over it, whereas, if the dressing is served in such a way that it may be used as sparingly as desired, the chances are the treat will not be overlooked. Individual servings are prepared in lettuce cups made of the small inner leaves filled with mayonnaise and served at the side of the salad; or green pepper or onion rings may be made by cutting one-fourth inch rings, filling them with mayonnaise and serving as a topping (which may be removed if not wanted) or one on each side.

Another way to enjoy salads is to serve variety in the dressings.

Give Distinctive Flavour to Meats With Curry Sauce

Comparatively few housewives make use of the pungent curry powder as a means toward variety in seasonings. The curry sauce was designed to make the East Indians' insipid and inevitable bowl of rice more palatable and to stimulate lagging appetites during depressing weather.

Rice invariably accompanies a curry and meat and fish may or may not be used in its make-up. Vegetable curries are excellent, too, and help solve the everyday luncheon or supper problem.

Curries always make very attractive dishes to serve because the rice is placed on a hot serving dish to form a border and the other material in the curry is put in the centre. This suggests an inviting way to use up odds, the left-over meat is reheated in the curry sauce and the meat and sauce are served in the border of rice. Of course, it's the curry sauce which gives the unusual and distinctive flavour to the dish.

CURRY SAUCE

One scant tablespoon curry powder, 1 tablespoon flour, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 cups tomato juice or meat broth, 1 onion, 1 tablespoon chutney sauce, 1 1/2 tablespoons lemon juice, 1 teaspoon sugar, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon pepper.

Melt butter and stir in curry powder and flour. Cook and stir until frothy. Slowly add tomato juice or meat broth, stirring constantly. When smooth add minced onion, lemon juice, sugar, salt and pepper. Simmer for 30 minutes. If chutney sauce is not available cucumber rings or mixed sweet pickle can be used. If you can add 1 tablespoon claret or port to the sauce when ready to add the meat.

Almost any kind of left-over meat can be reheated in this sauce and served in a border of well cooked rice. Or cheap cuts of meat can be cut in dice and browned quickly in hot fat. Then simmer them in the sauce either in the oven or on top of the stove. A cheap cut of lamb is delicious cooked this way.

The following rule of East Indian curry is quite exotic in flavour and embodies a curious combination of coconut, onion, lemon and banana.

EAST INDIAN CURRY

One pound lean beef or mutton of any cut, 1 tablespoon curry powder, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 onion, 1-2 lemon, 1-2 teaspoon salt.

Cut meat into small cubes. Melt butter in stew pan and when it bubbles add onion finely minced and curry powder. Stir with a fork and cook five minutes. Add boiling water to cover and simmer one hour, adding more water if necessary. Add salt, juice of lemon, banana cut in inch slices and coconut infusion. Simmer until tender and serve with rice.

To make coconut infusion grate or scrape coconut and let stand in one cup boiling water for twenty minutes. Strain through cheese-cloth, squeezing coconut as dry as possible.

One teaspoon thinly slice green ginger can be substituted for the banana if convenient.

The English often add 1 chopped apple and 1 tablespoon grated coconut to the curry sauce.

SWEETBREADS AND ALMONDS IN CASES

Wash 2 pairs of sweetbreads in cold water, soak for an hour in slightly warm water, then rinse in cold. Plunge into boiling water and let simmer till firm. Drain and press between plates till flat. Make a white sauce of 2 tablespoons of butter, 2 of flour, 1 1/2 cups rich milk or thin cream, with salt and pepper to taste and a dash of paprika. Steep a blade of mace in the sauce for a few

BAKED APPLES

When apples are to be baked in the oven their cores should first be removed by means of a special circular apple-corer. A slight incision should then be made with a knife all round the middle of each apple. The skins may then be removed without difficulty when the apples are done. If no special corer is available an ordinary potato-peeler makes a good substitute. It should be inserted just at one side of the core, pressed down right through the apple, and then turned round once or twice. It will cut the core out neatly, without any waste.

PINEAPPLE PRESERVE

Here is a recipe for delicious marmalade which may well take the place of the ordinary variety on the breakfast table occasionally.

Thinly slice three oranges and one lemon, removing pips. Mix in a large cupful of finely chopped pineapple, cover with four cupful of water, and leave in an earthen crock all night. Next day, boil up, and continue to cook for two hours. Leave to cool, add two large cupful of granulated sugar, simmer again for another hour, or until a little sets when tried on a cold saucer. Turn into warm pots, and tie down.

TRY THESE—

Put two tablespoonfuls of vinegar into a small saucepan with a little pepper, and boil it quickly till it has reduced to one tablespoonful. Put the saucepan over boiling water, and stir in the yolks of three eggs, salt and a piece of butter previously mixed in a basin. Add small bits of butter and stir till the sauce is smooth. Do not let it boil, and serve as soon as it is made.

Maitre D'Hoel Sauce

Melt a fairly large piece of butter with a small teaspoonful of water and the juice of a lemon. When it is hot, add salt and a little freshly chopped parsley.

Mustard Sauce

Mix a dessertspoonful of flour with an ounce of malted butter, pepper, a tablespoonful of dry mustard, a teaspoonful of vinegar and a little water, and stir it on a slow heat till it thickens.

Delicious Dish Of Tripe

Try this casserole way with tripe and you will be delighted with the result.

Cook the tripe, then cut it into strips when cold and marinate it in oil and vinegar in equal parts.

While it is soaking, fry a minced shallot, or small onion, golden in butter, add half a pound of mushrooms cut in thin slices, and cook them for ten minutes. Take out mushrooms and onion and in the butter stir an ounce of flour, moistening it afterwards with two cupful of tomato puree.

In a buttered casserole put a layer of the drained tripe, then a third of the sauce, all the mushrooms, more sauce, and half a cupful of breadcrumbs; then the rest of the tripe, the rest of the sauce, and more breadcrumbs. Dot with butter, and bake in the oven until brown, about twenty minutes.

minutes. Cook until slightly thickened. Add 5 tablespoonfuls of blanched almonds which have been shaved fine. 1 cup of small canned mushrooms cooked for 5 minutes in butter, the sweetbreads cut in cubes and 4 tablespoonfuls of sherry. Simmer a few moments, then turn into party cases which have been heated in a moderately hot oven. Garnish with chopped toasted almonds.

MARMALADE BISCUITS

Roll baking powder biscuit mixture 1 inch thick. Cut in ovals 6 inches long and 3 inches wide. Make 1/2 inch cuts one inch from and parallel with ends. Put 1 teaspoon of marmalade in centre. Bring one end of dough through hole in other end. Bake in a hot oven.

If you do not wish to heat the oven to prepare these biscuits you may serve date nut bread in place of them.

Date Nut Bread

1 1/2 cups dates
1 1/2 cups boiling water
2 tbs. shortening
1 1/2 cups sugar
1 tsp. salt
1 egg
2 1/2 cups pastry flour
1 tsp. soda
1 tsp. cream of tartar
1 cup walnut meats chopped
1 tsp. vanilla

All YIELD to the QUICK ACTION of

'ASPRO'

THOUSANDS have testified to the efficacy of 'ASPRO' and thousands more have proved by use that 'ASPRO' definitely soothes away the excruciating pains of Lumbago, Sciatica, Neuralgia, Headaches, etc. It quickly stops the pain. There is no waiting or delay; furthermore, 'ASPRO' is safe, and it does not harm the heart, digestion, or stomach. It can be taken by anyone, anywhere, at any time, and the reason why 'ASPRO' has such a large number of uses in every home is because, after ingestion in the system, it is an internal antiseptic—an anti-pyretic or fever reducer—an anti-periodic—a powerful germicide, and a definite solvent of Uric Acid.

Wonderful for Lumbago and Rheumatism

Dear Sir:—
My father has suffered for a number of years with LUMBAGO and RHEUMATISM in a severe state, being in bed 8 or 9 weeks at a time each year. Some time ago he tried 'ASPRO' Tablets for relief, and they acted wonderfully.

During the last 12 years he has taken very many Tablets but he enjoys better health and does not get a return of severe pains nor any ill effects from taking your 'ASPRO'.

He continues to take 'ASPRO' Tablets daily and would recommend anyone suffering from LUMBAGO or RHEUMATISM to try 'ASPRO' Tablets as they give such splendid relief.

Yours sincerely,
SP/M (MUS) L. WOLSEY.

12 Months' Sciatica Stopped in a Fortnight with 'ASPRO'

27 Marine Pde., ST. KILDA, June 28, 1932.

Dear Sirs,

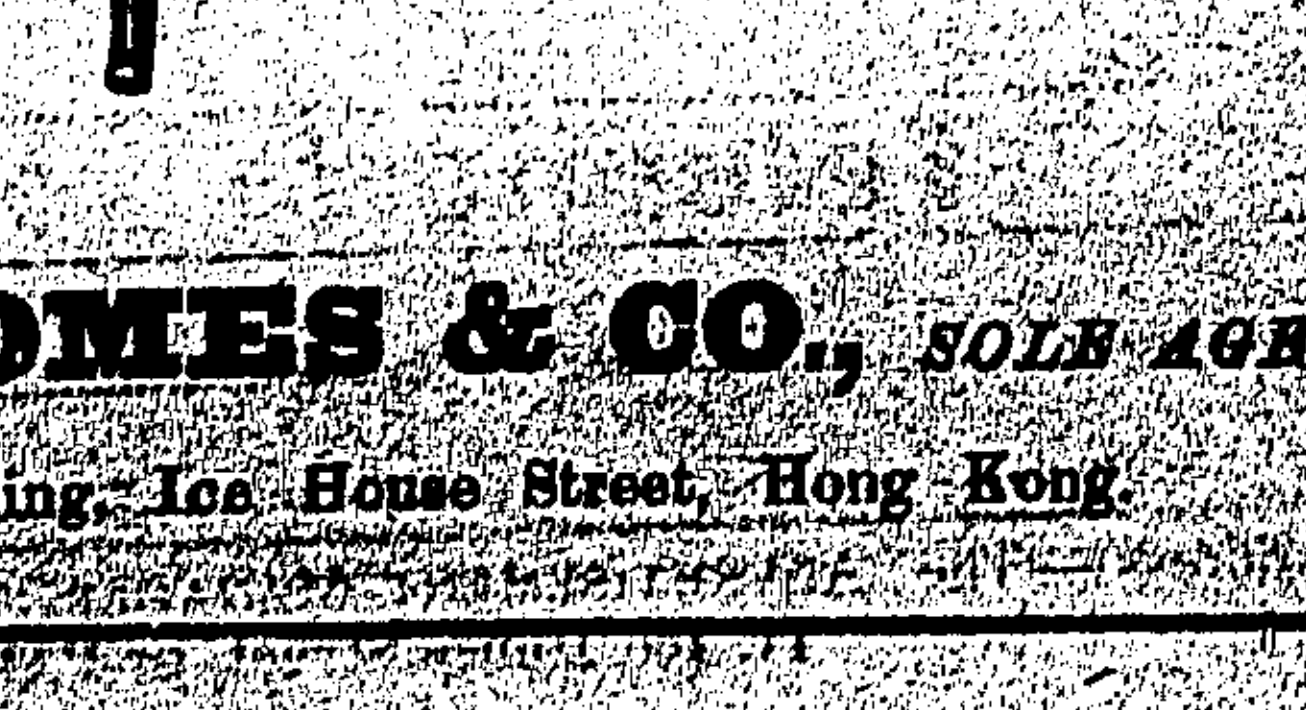

For nearly 12 months I have been suffering with Sciatica, and could hardly walk with the pains in both legs. I was recommended to take 'ASPRO', which I did, night and morning, with the result that in a fortnight the pain had practically left me, and I was able to walk about in perfect ease.

Yours faithfully,

THE AFFAIRS OF CELLINI

Felled

Dinolli had a light cloak over his arm and this he deftly threw over Benvenuto's sword, rendering him helpless for the moment. Before Benvenuto could withdraw his sword from the entangling cloak Dinolli struck down fiercely with his heavy sword. So close was he to finishing Benvenuto with a stroke, that the blade cut through the fullness of his sleeve. At the same time Dinolli gave a turn and tug with the cloak about Benvenuto's blade, so that there was but one thing to do—use his dagger with his left hand.

Dinolli fell at the first blow from the knife, nor did he move again. Guards came within the half hour. The ruffian said of the dead Dinolli did not know Benvenuto. He could not say who it was that had severed his ear, but whoever it was, had slain Dinolli. Cardinal Orsini knew well enough who it was, and sent the guards to the home of Benvenuto.

The guards were admitted at once, hilariously invited to drink and to eat and to join in their games. Benvenuto and his two faithful friends seemed to be so drunk with wine that they must have been at it for many hours. They questioned Benvenuto's servant, who assured them that he was exhausted as he had been serving them since before dinner.

The guards departed and reported to Orsini that the slayer Of Dinolli must have been someone other than Benvenuto, since he had two reputable comrades, young noblemen, were drunk and hilarious and had been gaming and drinking since before dark.

Orsini was more furious than ever at the report of the guards. He called them fools, had worse. He knew well enough from his spies that Benvenuto had been in the home of Signora Gorini since before dark, that Benvenuto was frequently entertained there. But he wanted proof.

The good name of Signora Gorini brought to disgrace, Orsini also believed, would cause her brothers to kill Benvenuto at the first opportunity. Now everything seemed to be spoiled and he would have to discover other means of wreaking his vengeance on Benvenuto.

But at this moment another of the Cardinal's henchmen came to him with information that delighted him.

So it was that while Benvenuto and his friends were joyously celebrating his clever escape, a serving woman came to his home. His servant soon beckoned him out of the room and whispered that she came from Signora Gorini!

"Well, what is it, woman?" Benvenuto demanded, already fearful that matters had not gone as well as he believed. She gave him a note.

"Flee for your life," the note read "for two of my servants who were bribed saw you go through the house and reported it, and also in your haste, you left your cloak with your own design on it's buckle. The guards found it and took it away."

Benvenuto told the woman to go back and report his gratitude to the signora.

He went back to his friends.

"Unless I escape from Rome this night," he said, "there will be an end to the greatest gold-smith of all time, myself, Benvenuto!"

If it isn't political intrigue that endangers Benvenuto, it is his affairs of the heart. Don't miss tomorrow's exciting instalments.

COMING SOON TO THE ALHAMBRA

"College Rhythm"

LeRoy Prinz gratuitously is giving the rooting sections of America's colleges something to shoot at in Paramount's "College Rhythm," coming Saturday to The Alhambra Theatre.

With 150 gorgeous girls at his disposal, the studio dance director has worked out a "syncopated rooting section" for the film, which has Joe Penner, Lanny Ross, and Jack Oakie in featured roles.

Western universities started the idea of bleacher stunts, with cards, between halves of classic grid encounters. Midwestern universities featured acrobatic yell leaders, one college even offering a course in this activity. Eastern colleges

THE MAN WITH TWO FACES

Now Showing At The Alhambra

Ricardo Cortez could not have been anything except an actor. From the time he was fifteen years old, it was his one ambition and interest in life.

One day, a Fort Lee studio needed extras for a Violet Mersereau picture. Ricardo got there at the break of day and was hired. He worked so hard and so seriously that the director laughed, but gave him more work. He began getting small parts. He was an actor.

By 1923, when he got his first contract, he had gained a great deal of experience to supplement his natural talent and a year later played Greta Garbo's lead in "The Torrent." This brought him other roles and he almost had fame by the heels when talking pictures were born.

While he had come from Vienna, his birthplace, when only three years old, he had a slight accent that was a disadvantage in talkies. He worked hard to overcome his handicap and won out.

He did "Illit" and "The Private Life of Helen of Troy." Then he starred for another company for a while and finally came back to the First National-Warner Bros. lot, where under his new starring contract he has been uninterruptedly successful.

"The Shakedown," "The House on 56th Street" and "Mandalay" were followed by "Wonder Bar." Now he is appearing in "The Man With Two Faces" at The Alhambra Theatre.

The driving force that made Cortez stick to his single ambition and attain it is evident in his personality to-day. He speaks little, he makes friends cautiously, is never impulsive and appears stern and unyielding.

Recently married to a New York society woman, Ricardo Cortez returned from his honeymoon to work on "The Man With Two Faces," in which he has the first heroic role he has appeared in for years, almost always having been cast as the villain. In this production, however, he is a theatrical producer, who is deeply in love with his leading lady, a part played by Mary Astor, and wins her love after her worthless husband has been slain.

The production is a thrilling mystery drama based on the play by George S. Kaufman and Alexander Woolcott as produced by Sam H. Harris Theatrical Enterprises, Inc. Edward G. Robinson has the stellar role while others in the cast include Mae Clarke, Louis Calhern, Arthur Byron, John Eldredge, David Landau, Emily Fitzroy and Henry O'Neill. Archie Mayo directed from the screen dramatization by Tom Reed and Niven Busch.

"HAVE A HEART"

Commencing To-day At The Queen's

The singing voice of Jean Parker can now be heard at its best in a number written for her by Nacio Herb Brown and Arthur Freed titled "A Little Ray of Sunshine" which is also used as a theme melody for her first starring vehicle, "Have A Heart" filmed by the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios and which is the new attraction at the Queen's Theatre from to-day to Saturday. The new melody is expected to add another musical hit to the record of the composers who recently created the "Carlo," sensational new dance rhythm.

The range of the selection is specially adapted to Miss Parker's voice and is said to add a new field of accomplishment for the young star's abilities.

"Have A Heart" directed by David Butler offers a tender romance that stirs the heart with its depth of human feeling. Playing opposite Miss Parker is James Dunn and supporting these two leading players are Una Merkel, Stuart Erwin, Edward Brophy, Paul Page and Willard Robertson, the first two supplying the comedy highlights of the picture.

rarely have organized rooting sections. But Prinz, with his 150 girls, has created a feminine rooting section that does all of its stunts to the syncopated music of Mack Gordon and Harry Revel. Intricate dance steps are mixed with such stunts as spelling the name of the store, making pictures of the president and other typical bleacher work.

"THE LODGER"

Showing To-day At The Star

"The Lodger" is a picture which opens up with a thrill and finishes with a bang. The mysterious personality of the lodger is built up extremely well, and the direction, switching swiftly from scene to scene, maintains fine continuity of story and action. "The Lodger" is a distinctly thrilling mystery drama.

Elizabeth Allan has never done anything more sincere and true to life than the characterization of an inconspicuous little Londoner in this film. Way back in the silent days "The Lodger" made a considerable stir. It was acknowledged as a British picture that struck a new and invigorating note in home production, and the best thriller to date. That was six years ago and "The Lodger" was then produced as a Gainsborough picture. A new version has now come from the Twickenham Studios, this modern adaptation of Mrs. Belloc Lowndes being directed by Maurice Elvey.

As in the previous version, Ivor Novello plays the part of the mysterious lodger with strange and mystical touch. He cleverly maintains the suspense of the action by his deliberation, and the dialogue is at all times as mystifying as his movements and general attitude.

A strong cast supports Mr. Novello. Elizabeth Allan is "Daisy Bunting," A. W. Baskcomb "Mr. Bunting," Barbara Everest "Mrs. Bunting," and Jack Hawkins "Joe Martin."

"The Lodger" of to-day is not "The Lodger" of six years ago. The story and its treatment have been modernised, the scenario by Miles Mander and Paul Rotha has departed freely from the original version, altogether to the advantage of the action and talking-screen technique.

The result is that the picture offers entertainment that is said to be mystical, thrilling and suspenseful. "Under Maurice Elvey's direction the many intriguing situations have been handled with a sure touch and "The Lodger" may be claimed as a distinct credit for the Twickenham Studios.

Next Change At The King's

What price glory?

Hollywood is famous for its ex-royalty and former dignitaries, looking out an existence in the movies. Even current celebrities are sometimes found—at the studios, but recently one of the strangest episodes in the annals of pictures came to light.

During the making of Warner Baxter's latest Fox picture, "Hell in the Heavens," which comes on Sunday to the King's Theatre, an autographed photo of Baron von Richthofen, famous German war ace, was needed for a scene. Naturally Director John Blystone and Producer Al Ruckert wanted the authentic thing. After much scurrying about the property department discovered that there are but six real personally autographed pictures of Richthofen in the world, and two of them are in Hollywood.

The first owner was approached for the loan of his treasure, but he wouldn't even listen to any proposition. The second was very reluctant. Finally he agreed to lend it for two days' shooting, at $10 per day. No insurance was placed on the picture, because of the inability of the owner to name a proper valuation. It is something that money could never replace.

Others in the cast of "Hell in the Heavens" are Conchita Montenegro, Russell Hardie, Ralph Morgan, Herbert Mundin, Vince Barnett, Andy Devine, William Stack, J. Carroll Nash, William Stelling and Vincent Carato.

penseful. "Under Maurice Elvey's direction the many intriguing situations have been handled with a sure touch and "The Lodger" may be claimed as a distinct credit for the Twickenham Studios.

COMING TO THE QUEEN'S

"The Old-Fashioned Way"

Baby LeRoy, Hollywood's youngest motion picture star, is teamed again with his deadly and feudal rival, W. C. Fields, Paramount's comedian in the latter's new picture, "The Old-Fashioned Way" scheduled as the next change at the Queen's Theatre.

Originally teamed up in Paramount's "Tillie and Gus," this pair works together for the second time in this production.

Fields is presented as the manager and leading man of a hungry troupe of stock players, such as used to tour the provinces in the Gay 90's.

Ducking the sheriff and the late hotel keeper in one town, they flee to the next where it is Fields' fortune to encounter the town's richest widow, a fatuous lady with dramatic ambitions and a romantic urge.

Her son, played by Baby LeRoy, takes a liking to Fields, and the widow finances the troupe on Fields' promise that she is permitted to act with them.

So, torn between love of money and his duty to his company, Fields manages to find a happy solution for his troubles and even a happy one for the romance of his daughter, Judith Allen.

Featured in the supporting cast are Joe Morrison, who rose to fame by his popularization of "The Last Round Up" in the Ziegfeld Follies, and another actor who is staging a motion picture comeback—Jack Mulhall.

One of the features of the film is a condensed version of that old-fashioned melodrama, "The Drunkard" or "The Fallen Saved," which uses the entire company currently producing the play on the Los Angeles stage.

William Beaudine directed from a screen play by Garrett Weston and Jack Cunningham.

"20TH CENTURY"

At The King's To-day

Disclosing a flair for comedy that even his most enthusiastic admirers had never suspected, John Barrymore appears today at the King's Theatre in the screen version of the famous stage play, "20th Century," one of the most hilarious comedies to come out of the film factories in a month of Sundays, and will keep the audience in one continuous uproar of laughter.

The film purports to tell the story of Oscar Jaffe, an egotistical stage producer, who takes an unknown girl, makes a star of her, and brings her to the heights of fame.

In the splendid supporting cast are seen Carole Lombard, as the temperamental Lily Garland, the object of Jaffe's pursuit; Walter Connolly as the producer's distressed business manager; Roscoe Karns as the cynical, wise-cracking press agent; O'Malley, and Etienne Girardot, Ralph Forbes and Charles Levison in important roles.

Howard Hawks directed the film from the screen adaptation by Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, coauthors of the original Broadway stage success. He has imparted a brisk pace and dramatic power to the film that makes it even greater than the original version. "20th Century" is an excellent picture, excellently done. Don't Miss It!

GROUND RISKS

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, Feb. 1.
The case of an air liner which was blown over in a gale, while picked in the open in the case of "Man" raises a point in aviation insurance of interest to the private owner.

In the case of "Man" the comprehensive policy is taken out to cover all risks. In the case of private owners insurance companies sometimes separate ground risks from flying risks. The premium on the former is, of course, much smaller.

Flying risk begins when the airplane has actually begun to take off, even though it may not have left the ground.

But should the machine be merely taxiing to or from its hangar or preparatory to getting into position for engines to be opened up for the take-off this is considered to be a ground risk.

Private owners who have overlooked this point may find that damage done to the machine on the ground is not covered if they have not paid the additional small premium.

SOCIAL WELFARE

Poverty At Close Quarters

(By Rev. T. F. Ryan, S.J.)

Poverty is one of those things about which it is easy to talk in generalities. Naturally, just as wealth, or capitalism, or unemployment must often be discussed in the abstract, and so made the subject of generalities, so too must poverty. But those who speak of poverty do not always discuss it as a social problem; they talk about its effect on character, its consequences in relation to health and similar topics, without ever coming down to real facts, for the simple reason that actual contact with poverty has never been a part of their experience. Without this contact, one knows poverty only at second-hand, and to speak of it then is to be in the position of one who presumes to discuss the classics of one language whose literature he knows only through translation.

If it is unsatisfactory to speak of poverty without some personal acquaintance with it, it is equally unsatisfactory to engage in any kind of welfare work connected with it without some personal experience of conditions when life is lived below the poverty line. Nothing could be more unreal than an effort on the part of any one to do something for the benefit of those who live in want, without some personal acquaintance with those for whom the good is intended. Mere study of statistics, or reading of what others have seen or said is not enough, for "the proper study of mankind is man."

Personal Contact Essential
Personal acquaintance with poverty means going among the poor, talking with them, seeing how they live, taking an intelligent interest in their lives, and maintaining a continued acquaintance with some families over a certain period of time. This may seem too much to ask, but a very slight consideration will show that it is not, while to pretend to act without it would be an impertinence. Those who have attempted to work without this experience and then at a latter date have mixed among the poor and acquired it are unanimous in acknowledging its need.

Strangely enough, the need of this contact is vigorously denied by some. These quote the example of shareholders at a meeting who decide on policy for an industry of which personally they know nothing, or of financiers and stockbrokers who never find it necessary to have personal acquaintance with the working conditions of concerns which they keep in existence. But the parallel is obviously false. A more natural comparison would be someone dealing with tropical diseases who had never in a tropical area, or deciding about working conditions in a factory which he had never visited. Ignorance of this kind can be appreciated here in the East, where we so often hear of comments made on Eastern affairs in the West, and accepted as authoritative, though we know that they are based on ignorance beyond enlightenment.

Real Sympathy No Offence
An objection is sometimes made that, no matter how useful this contact may be, it cannot be gained without giving annoyance and offence to the poor, and that it is better to remain in the world of theory than to penetrate into the world of fact by peering into privacy and treating the poor as an object of curiosity. It is true that if experience could be gained only in this way it would be better not to try to acquire it. But where there is real sympathy and a genuine desire to help there is no fear of giving offence or of offence being taken. If visitors were to go among the poor, note-book in hand, asking perpetual questions, and acting as inspectors, then they would naturally cause resentment and learn nothing. This is not the way to get to know poverty. To know it one must go and work the poor. The real way to get to know the poor is to go among them as a sympathetic social worker.

CORRESPONDENCE

(To the Editor "Daily Press")

Confucian Classics

Sir,—At the prize distribution of the Government Vernacular Middle School which took place some three weeks ago, I gave as my opinion that two of the books of the Confucian Classics, (namely, the Confucian Analects and the Book of Mencius), are to the Chinese people what the Bible is to Europeans; and that, in spite of these two books having been written over 2,000 years ago, they are couched in language so simple that anyone with ever so slight a knowledge of Chinese can master them.

St. John's Review in its issue for the current month while admitting the analogy between the Chinese Classics and the Bible, contends that—

"Whereas the former is written in a language divorced from the spoken language and is somewhat difficult to learn, the latter is expressed in the simple, everyday language of the people so that even a child in the earliest stages learns very quickly to read and understand very large portions of it."

I do not know where the Editor of that paper got the idea that our Confucian Analects and the Book of Mencius are difficult, for we Chinese who know our own mother tongue are all agreed that these two books are written in a style which is at once simple, limpid, and crisp—in short—the style of the Authorized Version of 1611.

One of the greatest of our Chinese scholars the late Mr. Leung Kai Chiu in an article written in 1925 and bearing the heading "An index of books for the study of Chinese in its early stages," referring to the Confucian Analects and the Book of Mencius says—

"For the last 2,000 years the Confucian Analects have formed the principal perennial spring from which the people of China have been obtaining material for thought. Since the end of the Sung Dynasty (A.D. 960 to 1278) the Book of Mencius has attained a position equal to that of the Analects. It is not too much to say that these two books regulate the actions of the mind and of the outward behaviour of the Chinese. It is therefore to be hoped that the student will read them thoroughly till he can reproduce them from memory and even if this is impossible he should read them many times over and at any rate commit part of the text to memory, or select and remember those sayings which it is intended should be followed, both physically and mentally to assist in self culture and the nourishing of one's inner man."

The texts in the Confucian Analects and the Book of Mencius are not by any means difficult to understand. The Editor of St. John's Review contends, however, not only that the Chinese Classics are difficult but that the Bible is in "simple everyday language."

But surely that is rather an exaggeration. There is, at least in the Authorized Version, much archaic vocabulary and many archaic turns of phrase which may add to its beauty but not to its intelligibility.

He not only makes this erroneous comparison but also suggests that the supposed difficulties of the Confucian Classics be brought into line with the supposed easiness of the Bible. He says—

"It is for that reason that the new school of Chinese Scholars is advocating the simplification of the written language to make it correspond with the spoken language and therefore more accessible to the many millions of China. It is in this new medium that they wish the excellent moral tenets of Confucian (sic) to be expressed."

Now Dr. Hu Shih of whom one naturally thinks when "the new school of Chinese scholars" is mentioned, did apparently advocate, in his address at Hong Kong University, the crapping of the traditional language, it being a "dead language," nevertheless he stated in 1925, in an article entitled "An absolute minimum list of books for students in the Chinese language," that the Confucian Analects and the Book of Mencius,

LIFE OF HELEN KELLER

Professor Brown's Lecture

Yesterday evening Professor W. M. Brown gave a very interesting discourse to an appreciative audience at the Sailors' and Soldiers' Home on the story of Helen Keller the blind and deaf authoress. The lecture was illustrated with slides.

To those people who are in command of every faculty which nature had endowed them, the story of Helen Keller's life and achievement cannot fail to be an inspiration.

At an early age this remarkable woman had lost both her sight and hearing through an illness which was never diagnosed. At that time she could not learn to speak and was in fact like a dumb animal.

Thanks to the way led her by a wonderful teacher this woman has become a woman of culture and scholarship and is known as an authoress of several books and articles in magazines. She is known to have an amazing courage and endurance.

She was endowed with robust common sense, enthusiasm and cheerfulness, having the purest and sweetest mind of any living creature, so the speaker described her.

Through her mother having heard of the Perkins' Institute, Helen's teacher Miss Anne Sullivan was introduced. The teacher herself was at one time an inmate of that Institution and later became a teacher.

With a big task before her, she, by persistence, managed to do it and made Helen Keller more like a child and started to imbibe knowledge to her. After many attempts the child began to understand. She made quick progress and soon learned to write. Later she learned several foreign languages, history, astronomy. Her progress in her work despite her deficiency made her a friend of many prominent people of America and Europe.

Professor Brown then gave examples of her beautiful diction and her philosophical outlook. Although deaf her sense of touch was so highly developed that she could tell the difference between violin and piano music. In her works she described colours and differences between various musical instruments.

Such was the life of Helen Keller as was told by Professor Brown who had made a special study of this subject.

Since, then, the late Mr. Leung Kai Chiu, admittedly a conservative, and Dr. Hu Shih, whom we might term a revolutionary, both very high authorities, agree that Classics can and should be studied in their original form even by beginners, it is evident that any attempt to simplify the Classics is both unnecessary and undesirable.

THE ROYAL WEDDING

Geographical Error In Certificate

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, Feb. 1.

Either the marriage certificate of the Duke and Duchess of Kent contains a geographical error, or there is a part of Middlesex which is not in the Middlesex known to the public.

Certainly it is not administratively in Middlesex. But while it is not in, nor of, the county, it is claimed by speech and writing to be Middlesex.

"In the Close of St. Peter, Westminster, in the County of Middlesex," reads the marriage certificate of the Duke and Duchess of Kent.

Now the City of Westminster, as every citizen knows, is in the County of London. For was not the "County of London" defined by the Local Government Act, 1888, and by the London Government Act, 1899?

And was not the City of Westminster created a City by Royal Charter in 1900, extending from the western end of Fleet Street to Kensington Gardens, and from Oxford Street to the Thames? How, therefore, can it be proved that Westminster Abbey, or "the Close of St. Peter, Westminster" is "in the County of Middlesex"?

Still the Wonder Grew.
An official of the Middlesex County Council, asked to unravel the tangle, admitted that the Middlesex Guildhall, close to the Abbey, is in Westminster. Asked whether Westminster was in Middlesex or in London, he meditated awhile and whispered: "Say Westminster, S.W. 1."

An official of the Westminster City Council, on the other hand, at first delivered himself of the clear-cut opinion that Westminster was in London and then cautiously referred "the Morning Post" representative to the Registrar's Office.

An official at the Registrar's Office informed the inquirer that the words "County of London" had once been in use, but that now the official formula was: "In the Metropolitan Borough of the City of Westminster."

FRENCH HONOUR FOR FINANCIER

Recognition For Nestle's Head

News have just been received by the local offices of the Nestle and Anglo-Swiss Condensed Milk Co. that the President of the Co., Mr. Louis Dapples, internationally known as an outstanding financier, banker, and business leader, has been awarded the honour of the "Commander of the Legion of Honour" by the French Government.

This interesting news was received by the Company's Head Office in a communication from Paris on the 22nd January advising that this decision was taken by the French Government to confer this honour upon Mr. Dapples.

This well merited distinction which the President of the Nestle and Anglo-Swiss Condensed Milk Co. has just received is in appreciation of his universally recognised outstanding qualities as a leading man in the business and financial world.

LARGE ESTATE

Late Mr. Lam Woo Leaves

$818,000

Mr. Lam Woo, alias Lam Kau-chek, the well-known local building contractor, of No. 1 Tramway Path who died on December 27, 1933, has left estate sworn at $818,700.

Double probate of the will has been granted to his son, Lam Chik-sun, of No. 117 Waterloo Road, Kowloon.

With the problem still unsolved the inquiring layman approached the Head Verger of Westminster Abbey.

Marriage certificates he said, were marked "County of Middlesex" before the L.C.C. was formed. They were still being and would continue to be, so marked. The wording of the Royal Marriage Certificate was, therefore, legally correct.

And, moreover, in the Head Verger's opinion, the Abbey Close was unique, and not subject to the ordinary limitations.

JAPAN AND JEHOI

Mr. Hirota made an important statement recently to the Diet on the foreign policy of Admiral Okada's Government. Its most interesting and most important passages dealt with Chinese affairs, and were interpreted in Japan and elsewhere as showing the desire of Japanese statesmen to improve their country's relations with the Chinese Republic. Nothing in the text of his speech conflicts with this interpretation; the relevant passages read, in fact, like an invitation to the new China to co-operate with Japan for the maintenance of peace and political stability in the Far East. Its sequel, however, must have been as disappointing to Mr. Hirota and to all Japanese politicians who share his views as it has been to the Chinese. For some time past there had been disputes between the Chinese on the one hand and the Manchukuo régime and its Japanese masters on the other concerning the ownership of a small area on the south-western border of the Jehol province of Manchukuo. It was hoped, especially after Mr. Hirota's speech, that the dispute would be amicably settled. The hope was swiftly disappointed. While negotiations were proceeding at Kalgan, Japanese and Manchukuo troops attacked the Chinese in or just beyond the disputed area and drove them away after two days' fighting, in which Japanese aircraft were engaged.

In itself this border conflict was a small affair. But the fact that it happened so soon after Mr. Hirota's professions of goodwill towards China throws a startling light on the inability of Japanese diplomacy to prevent the soldiers from taking such action as they deem militarily appropriate, without any regard to political considerations. This is ascribed to the independence of the Japanese army in Manchukuo within its own sphere, which may be aptly compared with that enjoyed by Julius Caesar and his legions in Gaul. This is a simple, and to all appearance a correct, explanation of many recent events in the Far East. But so long as the Japanese Foreign Office is unable to persuade the fighting services to co-ordinate their spirited activities with the declared policy of the Government, so long its spokesmen must not be disappointed if the reception of their pacific statements of policy abroad is marked by a tinge of scepticism.

CHILD WELFARE

1935 Designated As Children's Year

[Special to the "Hong Kong Daily Press" (Copyright)]

Shanghai, Feb. 12.
Upon the recommendation of the National Child Welfare Association of China, the National Government has designated 1935 as Children's Year. Owing to insufficiency of time for formulating a programme by the National Government at the beginning of this year, by reason of the late-ness of the recommendation, the opening ceremony of the Children's Festival will be conducted on April 4. The idea of this designation is to arouse public sentiment in regard to the promotion of child welfare, at the same time awakening in the children themselves a clear recognition of their position and prospects in the country.

The general plan and programme for the observance of Children's Year, which have been formulated by the Ministries of Education and the Interior, are now being submitted to the Executive Yuan for final approval. It will be promulgated throughout the country at the end of next week. At the recent meeting of the Secretary of the N. C. W. A. it was decided to appoint Mr. T. S. Chen, associate general secretary, to approach the authorities in Nanking with a view to arranging for a proper observance of the Children's Year in various parts of the country. It has been reported that the plan includes the organization of a Central Preparatory Committee and a Local Preparatory Committee, the former will comprise the Ministries of Education, Interior and Industries, and the latter the Bureau of Education, the Kuomintang and various social organizations.

After this programme we shall hold our usual Fashion Parade.

Speaking of fashions, there was a gorgeous fashion-display on Monday and I saw more than the usual number of really glorious furs in the Members Enclosure. It was not till the sun came out after tiffin that people started to shed them and to emerge like butterflies in all their bright dresses.

I loved the turquoise hat worn by Mrs. Dudley King and the wine-red costume worn by Mrs. Tam Pearce. Mrs. Dunbar had a fascinating scheme of light gray and looked very much amused, when she led in Liberty Bay after that spectacular frolic round the course. Mrs. "Mike" Turner was very "chic" in lawn tweeds with a very pretty hat to match. It is delightful to see Lady Shenton again after an absence of quite two years, and looking so beautifully "groomed" in the smartest and sleekest of brown suits, and a marvellous fox stole. Mrs. R. M. Henderson was very smart in dark brown, with a tie-collar of shaded orange. Mrs. Todd achieved a charming effect, by her clever mixture of browns and grays: Brown was very popular on Monday! I simply loved Mrs. Joseph's suit with the coral-velvet collar, and the saffron and brown of Mrs. Collis, and Lady Southern looks extremely nice in nigger-brown and a hat with a tiny orange feather.

Miss Ho Tung wore a graceful coat of dark green brocade, (she, by the way has been distinguishing herself by passing very stiff Medical Exams.) Mrs. Hancock looked trim in tweeds, and Mrs. Butler had the loveliest of fur coats. Honor Hancock was in dark blue and Alwen Owen Hughes had one of those attractive high-collared coats. Irene Butler looked a real "honey" in sapphire blue, with a little vest of lace. Minna Whittham was original with white and green polka-dots. Mrs. Benny Proulx was very pretty and smart as usual and Mrs. Bellamy looked charming in Navy, with a golden camellia in her buttonhole. I did not see Mrs. Mackie, but noticed Jean looking beautiful in royal blue and Mrs. Croucher was very distinguished in a coat and skirt of black taffeta.

Dividends were rather good on Monday, and somehow or other everyone seemed to be winning. Quite impossible I know, yet it sometimes happens!

JUDGE WANG'S VISIT TO JAPAN

Importance Exaggerated By The Press

MR. WANG CHING WEI'S FRIENDLY GESTURE

Tokyo, February 20. Dr. Wang Chung Hui, Judge of the Hague Court whose arrival in Tokyo has been splashed by the Japanese Press asserting that the visit is connected with negotiations for a Sino-Japanese rapprochement, had a three-hour interview with the Foreign Minister, Mr. Hirota, after which he told Reuter that he regretted the Japanese Press had greatly exaggerated the importance of his visit.

"I have no official mission in Japan and in returning to the Hague via America, I am seizing the opportunity of a week's stay in Tokyo in a private capacity to exchange views with Japanese statesmen in an effort to reconcile the Sino-Japan basis of peace and goodwill. Mr. Hirota and I talked on general matters of very broad basis and did not touch on concrete problems, but I feel Japan realises she must re-orient her policy towards China in view of the vital need for expanding her trade in that market," he said.

It is understood that Mr. Hirota explained to Dr. Wang Chung Hui Japan's new China policy on the lines of his recent Diet speech, adding as a matter for congratulation that China has shown lately an inclination to be more friendly to Japan and the Japanese Government would gladly give any sort of assistance to China if the latter attend to strict suppression of anti-Japanese movements and show sincerity to Japan.

Mr. Hirota is giving a luncheon in honour of the visitor on Friday.

CHINA'S HIGH HOPES

Nanking, Feb. 20. High hopes for "rational solution of fundamental issues" between China and Japan. If the people of the two countries sink their differences in a desire for durable peace were expressed by Mr. Wang Ching Wei in a speech at the Central Political Council. Commenting on Mr. Hirota's address at the Japanese Diet, Mr. Wang Ching Wei said "What I am going to say may be taken as an explanation of our fundamental policy towards Japan."

Mr. Wang Ching Wei said that China was willing to promote friendly relations with any nation, especially a neighbour like Japan, wherewith she was so closely bound by geographical, historical, cultural and racial ties. He recalled that Dr. Sun Yat Sen in his last speech appealed for Sino-Japanese co-operation for advancement of the welfare of both countries and admitted that up to the revolution of 1911 China had received great help and sympathy from the Japanese, but thereafter unexpected complications had arisen to bring about a deplorable atmosphere of insecurity affecting not only China and Japan but the whole world.

MATTER FOR REJOICING

"It is true we are now in the midst of a national crisis of the most severe nature, but we are confident that the troubles of the two countries can be solved by mutual sincerity. We opine that Mr. Hirota's speech agrees in spirit with what we have hitherto advocated. It is a matter of great rejoicing to us that by dint of mutual efforts Sino-Japanese relations will henceforth have an opportunity to improve and be restored into regular channels."

FOREIGN INTERESTS IN THE FAR EAST

Action In Manchukuo As A Warning

London, Feb. 20.

Even if the dangers enumerated by Lord Lothian are more remote than he and other observers apprehend assuming that Japan is less disposed to break the trammels of the Nine-Power Treaty than some of her recent actions suggested, yet her action in Manchukuo is a warning which other Powers with vast commercial interests in the Far East cannot afford to neglect, says the "Times."

The paper states as an instance that the "singular interpretation of the Open Door principle" is illustrated by the Manchukuo oil monopoly. It is conceivable that China and Japan will agree to shelve the discussion of the Manchukuo problem and co-operate in other directions. This possibility must naturally arouse interest and anxiety among the great foreign trading communities in China and their governments.

"Does Japan still attach the greatest importance to the maintenance of the Open Door in China" as Mr. Hirota assured the British Ambassador last April?" asks the paper.

EXPENDITURE IN BRITAIN

Keeping Pace With Budget

London, Feb. 20.

With six weeks to go to the end of Britain's financial year, the revenue returns issued last night show there is a good prospect that the Budget estimates will be realised and possibly exceeded. The estimate of ordinary revenue for current year was £706,520,000 and £573,878,320 has so far come in. An average of £187,730,000 for the remaining weeks is therefore required to reach that estimate and as last week's revenue was £24,401,461 it would seem that anticipations should be realised.

The income tax total is up on last year and £43,831,000 remains to be collected to reach the estimates. Last week £13,998,000 came in. Other items are well up to estimates.

Expenditure is above that of last year at £622,286,759 but the estimate including supplementary grants was for £711,190,000.

Hostile demonstrations against the Austrian Chancellor, Schuschnigg on the occasion of his arrival here on Thursday evening have been planned by the "Committee of Action of the common Socialist and Communist front" which published a manifesto to the working classes in the French capital, inviting them to assemble at 6.30 on Thursday evening before the railway station when the train conveying Schuschnigg is due.

INDIA BILL DEBATE

Appointment Of Viceroy

London, Feb. 20.

The long task of examining the India Bill opened at the Commons which displayed a businesslike mood in dealing with mass opposition and amendments. The first important subject tackled was the appointment of the viceroy. Sir Robert Horne moving an amendment to provide the establishment of a consultative committee consisting of ex-Viceroy whom the Prime Minister should consult before appointing a Governor-General under the new constitution. Sir Robert Horne insisted that the Governor-General was the keystone of the whole might and fabric of the constitution.

Sir Samuel Hoare sympathised with the object of removing the appointment of the Viceroy from the sphere of party politics, but he did not agree it would be wise to remove responsibility from the Prime Minister and the Cabinet.

The Liberals and Labourites also opposed the amendment, which was withdrawn.

ARMS TRADE CONTROL

Wide Divergence At Geneva

(Special to the "Hong Kong Daily Press")

(Copyright.)

Geneva, Feb. 19.

The proceedings on Tuesday at the disarmament conference committee on the supervision of the manufacture and trade in arms showed that very wide divergences exist as regards the aims of the various delegations. At a public session on Tuesday, the rapporteur, in this case the Polish delegate announced that the direct negotiations conducted with individual delegations had not yet resulted in the drawing up of the exact working plans and basis for continuing the deliberations. It was decided that further public discussion of the separate articles of the United States' draft agreement would take place forthwith.

The debate following this revealed that as regards the question of import and export of arms, France wants civil airplanes and spare parts treated exactly the same as military planes, while the United States expects distinction to be made between American and European continents. The British delegate asked for the exact list of arms. The Russian General Wenzoff wanted not only all spare parts

U.S. ARMY AND AIR FORCE

Heavy Expenditure Approved

Washington, Feb. 19.

The largest expenditure on America's army for 15 years and the construction of 547 new military aeroplanes, provided in the defence estimates was approved by the House of Representatives Appropriations Committee to-day.

A total of $312,000,000 was allocated to the army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1936, an increase of $48,000,000, as compared with 1935.

The Committee stated that it was willing to provide additional funds for the army if President Roosevelt took advantage of his authority and increased the army's strength from 118,000 to 165,000 men.

An expenditure of $45,000,000 was approved for the air corps, compared with $26,000,000 in 1935. The 547 new army aeroplanes, costing $7,836,000, will raise the number of available planes to 1,445.

HAUPTMANN'S FATE

To Be Argued In Appeal Court

Trenton, N.J., Feb. 19.

An appeal has been lodged on behalf of Hauptmann, under sentence of death in connection with the Lindbergh baby case, with the Court of Errors and Appeals, New Jersey's highest tribunal.

The appeal will be argued on March 28.

There was an earlier surprise created by the announcement that Hauptmann had requested Mr. Lloyd Fisher the second defence counsel, to take complete charge of the defence and the fund for the appeal.

This is attributed to the apparent reluctance of Mr. Edward Reilly to hurry on the application for appeal, which is said to have so angered Mr. Fisher that he went to Hauptmann's cell and secured authority to act as chief counsel for the defence.

On crossing into France the troops received en route a most cordial welcome from the French population and at Rheims were entertained by the local civil and military authorities.

The arrival of the British soldiers at Rheims Station was awaited by a large crowd which cheered enthusiastically and shouted "vivent les anglais" while the French military band played "God Save the King" and the "Marseillaise." The British officers were in the evening the guests at an official banquet, while other ranks were also entertained. LIBERTY BAY AGAIN WINS CHAMPION STAKES

Soldier Of Britain Accounts For Ladies Purse In Record Time

RACING HEART SETS NEW RECORD: MR. SUN MEETS WITH ACCIDENT

Two records were broken on the fourth day of the Annual Race Meeting yesterday, Soldier of Britain accounting for Trentbridge, the favourite, in the Ladies Purse in the record time of 1.44.3 while Racing Heart created a new record in the Adelaide Stakes, finishing in 1.58.3.

Liberty Bay as won the Champion Stakes convincingly by many lengths but was unbacked on account of the ban put up by the Hong Kong Jockey Club the previous day. Sadko was second and King's Warden was third. Diana Bay also took part in this race but was unplaced.

Mr. S. Y. Sun, the well-known Shanghai jockey, who steered Soldier of Britain to victory in the Ladies Purse in record time, met with a somewhat nasty accident in the Blue Mountain Plate later in the afternoon when his mount stumbled and threw him to the ground just near the finishing post. He received a kick in the right hip from the pony and was badly wounded.

The dividend for the Daily Double was $486.20.

LEIGHTON HILL STAKES

There were 23 starters for this race. Strathnairn, with Mr. Proulx got the best start and led almost till the last quarter when Wadebridge and Emergency Call spurred past her. Wadebridge won by a length from Emergency Call who was half a length in front of Tin Ho.

GRAND STAND STAKES

There was a good start in this race in which twelve ponies took part. Pontiac Bay and High Honour took the lead together, followed closely by Pacific Hall. In the straight, however, Flirt and Ythan spurred ahead and there was a thrilling struggle between these two ponies and Pontiac Bay, who managed to win by a short head. Ythan was second, a short head in front of Flirt.

LADIES PURSE

Only four starters took part in this race. Trentbridge started a hot favourite but the disappointed his large number of supporters by coming in third Soldier of Britain won the race by five lengths from Cossack's Beauty who was the same distance ahead of Trentbridge. The winner took the lead from the start with Trentbridge and Cossack's Beauty together behind. Chateau Bay, the other pony, did not complete the race as when near the Naval Pavilion she threw her jockey, Mr. Chanson. Fortunately the fall was slight and Mr. Chanson was able to get up none the worse for his experience.

Soldier of Britain set up a new record in this race, completing the distance in 1.44.3 which beat the one set up by Apollo. Soldier of Britain led all the way but there was a keen struggle on the straight between Cossack's Beauty and Trentbridge for second place. The former eventually won.

THE ADELAIDE STAKES

A good start featured this race which was won by Racing Heart who finished three quarters of a length in front of Night Star. Sancy Face led from the start and he maintained the lead till almost the finish when Racing Heart and Beg-Tor came up somewhat unexpectedly. The time for this race was 1.58.3, another record beating the previous best time of 2.00-2/5 which was set up by High Finance.

THE JOCKEY CLUB STAKES

Thirteen ponies faced the starter for this race. Fudge was the first to get away but he dropped behind when near the Black Rock. Bright View was conspicuous at this stage but in the straight she was beaten by Soldier of Germany by 3 lengths; New Star was third being the same distance behind.

THE BLUE MOUNTAINS PLATE

This race which was won by Rose Ann was marred by an unfortunate accident to Mr. Sun who was riding Soldier of Australia. Just near the finishing post the pony stumbled and threw Mr. Sun rather heavily on the ground, at the same time kicking him on the right hip which wounded him badly.

Got That led from the start, a lead which he held till the straight when Rose Ann came up and won comfortably. Snowy River was third, five lengths behind Got That. It was not a close race, the "also-runs" spreading to a distance of about 100 yards. There were 10 starters.

THE LUSITANO CUP

There were nine starters in this race which was won by Herod, the Derby Winner. Rose Queen was second and King's Jubilee third. Diogenes led from the start but when near the Black Rock she dropped behind to Herod who went on to win the race by five lengths. Rose Queen made a valiant effort to catch up the winner but in the straight home but the distance

THE CHAMPION STAKES

This race attracted five starters including Liberty Bay which of course was the hot favourite. She again won comfortably by many lengths but the ban on betting on her was still in force. Sadko ran a brilliant race to come in second as despite a bad start Mr. Needa guided his mount so brilliantly that she had plenty to spare on the straight home beating King's Warden by two lengths.

Liberty Bay led from the start and gradually increased her lead, followed by Gladiator, Diana Bay, King's Warden and Sadko. This order remained the same until Black Rock was reached when Gladiator slackened and was caught up first by Diana Bay and then by King's Warden. At this stage Sadko was still behind but he gradually reduced the lead and at the last quarter he made a brilliant spurt and went past Diana Bay and King's Warden. Meanwhile there was a keen struggle for third place between Diana Bay and King's Warden which the latter eventually won.

THE HONG KONG STAKES

There was a good start in this race. Lucky Strike led from the start followed by Bold Major and Lion Hunter. This continued for 3 quarters of the race, after which Lucky Strike was caught up by Invincible Knight who maintained the lead throughout. At the last quarter Sci-Fa and Propitious Time struggled for second place, the former eventually winning by half a length.

GRIFFINS CONSOLATION STAKES

Foxbridge ridden by Mr. Marshall won this race from a field of 11 starters. Estover led from the start while Jolly Eyes was last—many lengths behind. At the last quarter Foxbridge who was lying fifth all the time came up with a spurt, followed closely behind by Soldier of Peace and Bonny Dundee which finished in this order.

THE NORTHERN STAKES

This was an exciting race between Gold Picker and Tin Ho which was won by the latter by a short head. The winner led comfortably for three quarters of the distance but towards the end she had to exert her utmost to beat Gold Picker which was coming up strongly. Belmont Star was third.

THE CONSOLATION STAKES

The last race of the day attracted five starters of which King's Justice was the favourite. From the start the favourite took the lead followed by Oak Bay, Tiger, Ribble and Soldier of China. This order remained till the last quarter when Ribble went ahead of Tiger to come third. King's Justice won the race three lengths in front of Oak Bay.

TRIBUTE TO HON. MR. MACKIE

Presentation Made By H.E. The Governor

A sterling tribute to the splendid services rendered by the Hon. Mr. Charles Gordon Mackie to racing in the Colony was paid by His Excellency the Governor, Sir William Peel, K.C., M.G., K.B.E. during the fifteen interval at the races when he presented Mr. Mackie, on behalf of the stewards, officials and members of the Hong Kong Jockey Club, a silver salver, a silver coffee set and a silver cigarette case.

In making the presentation, His Excellency said that Mr. Mackie would leave the Colony on retirement at the end of the year and that he would be greatly missed in many directions. Mr. Mackie, he said, had been a Steward of the Hong Kong Jockey Club for the past 24 years and had been its chairman for the last seven years. He had always taken a great interest in racing and was largely responsible for producing the training times which had been of great help to many race-goers.

His Excellency concluded by wishing Mr. and Mrs. Mackie happiness and good health in the Old Country.

Mr. Mackie suitably replied, saying that he had been connected with racing ever since he came out to the Far East but what services he had rendered was for his own end as he was very fond of riding. Racing in the old days, he said, was far different from that of the present time and he was sure that many would agree that the Hong Kong Jockey Club had made many improvements. He thanked His Excellency Sir William Peel, and the Stewards, officials and members of the Jockey Club for the honour they had done him.

Prior to this function, another presentation was made when Miss Mackie presented the Ladies Purse to Mr. S. Y. Sun, the Shanghai jockey, following his win on Mr. Li Shiu Pang's Soldier of Britain in record time.

MAMAK HOCKEY TOURNEY

Radio Beat United

In a Mamak Hockey Tournament match, the Radio Sports Club defeated the United by two goals to 1 after a keenly-contested encounter at Caroline Hill yesterday.

The goals scored by the winners were through Awtar Singh, who was playing at centre-forward while Winch scored for the losers. From the start of the game, the Radio were attacking and within a few minutes Awtar Singh scored with a good goal, but the lead was short-lived. Winch equalised soon afterwards. Play was confined to mid-field, and there was no further scoring when the interval arrived.

At the resumption, Awtar Singh scored again for the Radio, to which the United were unable to reply and the whistle was blown with the score at 2 goals to 1 in favour of the Radio.

FRIENDLY GAME

United v. German Club

The United, after having engaged the Radio earlier in the day in a Mamak tournament game later played the German Club in a friendly match, later, the game resulting in a draw of two goals each.

Owing to shortage of players, Chowdhury, the Radio forward, turned out for the German team. Sander at the German forward line showed good combination with Chowdhury.

Winch scored for the United in the first half while Chowdhury equalised. In the second half, Sander scored for the German side to which the left in of the United replied.

NOTESGossip From The Camps

(By a Correspondent)

Referees were under discussion. One of the company, a club chairman, said "It's very easy to think a referee has done badly when all the time you are judging badly—and with bias." The chairman then told a story.

Once, he said, he saw Mr. Charlie Lines, the League referee, officiate at a Birmingham League game. He thought Mr Lines had done splendidly. Then they had to get police assistance to get the referee safely off the premises.

Obeyed Orders.

Here's the story of how Manager Jack Tinn, confined to the house by doctor's orders, contrived to sign Young, a Clydebank wing half, whose transfer was sought by three other clubs, all with representatives on the spot.

The Portsmouth manager isn't without friends in Scotland. One of these lent his aid. Result—the player travelled to Portsmouth; signed the forms, and the doctor's orders were strictly obeyed.

May Join Villa

What's the odds that Hodge, Bristol City's outside-right, will soon be playing on the same ground as he played at on Monday? The City then met Bury in a reply at Villa Park.

That is the latest about this winger. Manchester City have seen him often enough to make their minds up. Arsenal don't seem able to make their minds up. Aston Villa are in the reckoning.

When Burnley Stepped In.

Teddy Hodgson was one of the Turf Moor favourites when Burnley won the cup just before the war. Now they've nicknamed Ronnie Hornby, Burnley's latest inside-left, "Teddy Hodgson." That is no mean compliment, as anyone who remembers the original Teddy will understand.

Ronnie is a boy from Stalybridge Celtic. Burnley signed him on the last day of last season. Others were hoping to make a catch for nothing but the Lancashire club stepped in and did the right thing by the Stalybridge club.

The Two Doctors.

Football, like adversity, makes strange bed-mates. This, however, isn't any bedroom scene; just a par about what has happened to two young Scots who used to play for Glasgow University. One was called Ker; the other McLean.

The former is now Dr. D. A. Ker, club doctor at Burnley. The latter is Dr. W. McLean, director and medical consultant of Manchester United.

Good Lad, This.

He's only 18, yet the other week he was described as an "old head." That's enough to make anybody wonder. The player is Pickering, one of Burnley's junior centre-halves.

His main occupation is working in a Co-op dairy in Burnley. After work he plays for the Burnley "A" team. Then in the summer he plays cricket. Last summer he won a batting prize in the local Mills and Workshops League. He bowls as well-fast, slow or medium. Evidently a lad of parts.

Took a Chance.

Blackburn Rovers came in for criticism when they signed Sharp, the East Fife inside-left, and played him right away in the First Division team. The critics may have some word eating to do before long.

I hear that Sharp has been coming on strongly in the Rovers Central League side. Once, or twice recently it has been touch or go about him getting back into the first team.

Huddersfield's Error.

They should have signed Foulkes as well as Lythgoe from Stockport. The pair had a great understanding. That's what a football man said to me only the other day. It's a good job no one from Huddersfield was listening.

My friend evidently forgot that the Stockport right winger was at Huddersfield. The Town thought Foulkes would never be strong enough to stand the racket. And now you should see him having a tilt at the twelve-stoners!

Usual Friends.

The cynical say "There are no friends in football." Don't believe it. Here's a story to prove

HOME FOOTBALL
FORECASTS

(BY "LEFT OUT")

All teams in the English League are engaged on Saturday, and the Third Round of the Scottish Cup is also down for decision.

Arsenal are visiting Manchester City, and will have to go all out to take both points away, while Sunderland will probably be held by the Spurs, and Stoke is expected to send Portsmouth away without the points.

In the Second Division Bolton should have no difficulty in defeating Port Vale, and Brentford should win at home, but West Ham may have to be content with sharing the spoils at Newcastle.

Tranmere should add two points at Walsall's expense, and Chester will probably take a step forward over Doncaster's heads. Charlton and Reading playing at home should register wins but Watford may be held at Bournemouth.

In the Scottish Cup, Rangers, Aberdeen, St. Johnstone, Airdrie Hamilton and Hearts should win their way to the last eight where Celtic and Motherwell are waiting for them by way of a "bye."

"Left Out's" selections are given below in bold type together with distances visiting teams must travel to fulfil engagements, and previous results, where available.

Mr. Billy Harvey, Chesterfield's manager, went to the Huddersfield Town-Portsmouth replay to say "Thank you" to Jack Warner, the Pompey trainer, and give him a very nice box of cigarettes. The thanks and the cigarettes were tendered because Jack recently sent Shirley Abbott, the Chesterfield thinker, a radiant heat treatment gadget. Shirley liked the one Jack had but found difficulty in getting a similar one made. Jack did the necessary.

Oldham Effort.

Oldham Athletic will have a nice sum clear of the Billy Porter transactions when everything is settled. The Latics didn't play so very much for the transfer of Len Brown from Huddersfield Town. Other signings may be expected by the Boundary Park club.

A determined effort is to be made to stay in the Second Division. Tales were going round that the folks there were resigned to relegation. These are likely to be scotched by forthcoming events.

Attracts the Spotters.

January 30 is a date going down in the football annals just now. Why? Just because Chesterfield and Middlesbrough are meeting that day in a Northern Section Cup game.

The same clubs meet in a League game on Saturday, but not every body who wants to see the teams is free then. Next Wednesday is more suitable.

Forestalled
You would perhaps notice that Joe Patrick has been out of the Bury team for a match or two after making his sensational debut against Bolton Wanderers. Joe will soon be leading the Shakers again.

It is some time ago since I remarked in these columns that the Lancaster lad was destined for a higher niche in the game. Bury forestalled such clubs as Manchester City and Derby County. Preston North End were also interested in Joe, but didn't show their hand until they heard transfer rumours.

Players for Sale

When Preston North End land that inside-left they are out for they will have enough and to spare or inside-forwards. Hetherington's arrival at Deepdale was a timely step. The next item will, I believe, mean the parting of the ways for another of the inside forwards.

North End have been jingling the changes. Other clubs have taken note of the shuffles. They see a chance to nip in and conduct a useful spot of business. North End are always willing to discuss business.

Change That Fald

Stan Matthews—inside-right? There is some encouragement in that for the international change-right's switch over to the right-holding berth. Look what happened last Saturday in the match with Derby County.

HOME FOOTBALL NOTES

Stan changed places with Bobby Liddle, who had been playing moderately at inside-right. Almost immediately Stan started to be a power in the game. Bobby, restored to the place that was formerly his own, took on a new lease, with the result that the Potters pulled the game out of the fire.

Stoke officials say Matthews would be in the top class as an inside-right if he were a little more "robust" in his methods. Then comes the question of Liddle's usefulness. On current form, Bobby is fully entitled to the outside-right berth.

He Likes Work
A stylish youngster is George Vose, of Manchester, United. George has grown since he arrived at Old Trafford from St. Helens. He has put on over a stone in weight and by means of pads in his football boots he has gained several inches in his spring. Manager, Scott, Duncan points out that George can get up to a ball with the tallest of them.

He has another attribute. George is known to his colleagues as rather a quiet lad, but on the field he seems to forget that shyness. In a recent match, for instance, he was responsible for a shaft of humour. The United had been pressing for some time and George wasn't very busy. Seeing the trainer on the line he called over "Throw me another sweater, Tommy, I'm cold!"

Not Parting
What a lot of people are asking for information about Sedley Cooper. I remember some years ago getting Sedley on my "Six to Follow" list.

It was Joe McClelland, then manager of Halifax Town, who supplied the dope. Sedley is, of course, a Sheffield Wednesday player now. He understudies Ellis Rimmer. That's just too bad for Sedley, because Ellis is one of the most consistent wingers in the game.

You can't blame the scouts for phoning up Hillsborough, and you can't blame the Wednesday for refusing to listen to them. But as far as Cooper is concerned most people would like to see him at the top. About a dozen clubs have been turned aside.

SHANGHAI MARKET COMMENT

February 13, 1935.
Business was resumed on the local stock exchange last Thursday but trading was of very small dimensions. The only item of interest in the general market was 200 Kelly and Walsh at 20 for cash, this rate being 4½ points over the quoted prices. Business transactions were of a negligible quantity on the next day, the only transactions in the general market being 2 odd lots of Shanghai Power 6% Preferred at 132. The rubber section continued to be very neglected. Debentures tended to be easier and only a small business was done in this group. There appeared to be some pressure to sell Shanghai Power 5½% debentures on Saturday which were offered freely at 91.50 without attracting buyers. On Monday trading was again at a very low ebb. Beyond a few odd lots of Debentures the only other transaction was Chinese Engineering and Mining at 12.

It was announced on the Chinese Government Bond Market that beginning with February 7, for a period of 10 days business would be transacted on a curtailed schedule of 2 sessions daily. When business started following a weeks suspension for the New Year holidays, March quotations were available for all issues. Money conditions showed some relaxation after the New Year settlement was over and as a result prices showed substantial improvement. During Thursday's session cash advanced but apparently prices went up too fast and the market reacted strongly on the following day; during the second session the market showed downward tendencies. Starting with small losses the movement gradually increased and finally culminated in half point drops for Currency and 22 Year Customs.

RAIL TIES FROM U.S. TO CHINA

Enough In Year For 700 Miles Of Road

During 1934, the Columbia River lumber mills shipped 67,000,000 board feet of railway ties to China—Shanghai, Pukow, Tsingtao, Hankow, and Dairen, a banner year in lumber annals. During December, no less than 19,000,000 board feet were shipped, twice more than in any preceding month.

China imports from Portland, Oregon, and the neighbourhood, were enough to lay 700 miles of roadbed, the largest shipment of 7,500,000 feet arriving in the S. Julian Messrs. Dant & Russell were huge shippers and at one time 10,000,000 feet of ties were on their wharves. During December, it was noted that stacks of railway ties were piled over an area 1,000 feet long and ranging from 100 to 300 feet in width.

The year's shipping had its aftermath. January saw four additional vessels loading. This month will see additional ships leave the Columbia River with more ties. Exporters estimated that last year more ties were shipped to China, than ever were shipped over a similar period to any country.
